Auxiliary power supply specialists Generator Associates Ltd, are to introduce a new section on their website for used and second hand diesel and petrol generators.
June 2006

Due to increasing customer demand, Generator Associates have announced they will soon launch a new section on their easy to use website (www.generatorassociates.com), specifically focused on used and second hand diesel and petrol generators.

Generator Associates specialise in the supply of new and used generators, but will soon be able to communicate availability of used generators to their clients at the touch of a button, by detailing various generators and UPS online at www.generatorassociates.com.

They will have a range of high quality generators and UPS available online at outstanding prices. Not to mention details of the new generators and UPS ranges they advise on, supply, finance, install and maintain from world leading generator manufacturers SDMO and Pramac.

Generator Associates are the power supply specialists the professionals call when they need independent and expert advice on how to solve their power supply needs. They help a range of industrial and commercial organisations including providing generators for data centers, telecommunication centers, banks, production facilities, retail outlets and hotels. The industrial and commercial generators they provide are helping keep British and International organisations running when they suffer from mains power failures. They can also provide generators when your mains power supplier cannot provide sufficient power.

Whether it is a new or used generator you require, www.generatorassociates.com will provide some excellent solutions to your generator needs. For those who cannot wait for the upcoming used and second hand generator section on the website, call Generator Associates today to solve your power supply needs.
